

Bush School Pathway Program

Description

Texas A&M University-Texarkana has a collaborate arrangement with the Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas. The pathway program agreement provides A&M-Texarkana graduate students in the Master of Science Interdisciplinary Studies (MSIS) program to take online graduate seminars with the Bush School and then transfer the credits toward their MSIS degree. This will allow students the chance to have Political Science as their Master's degree emphasis. The online Bush School seminars are part of the Certificate in Advanced International Affairs (CAIA) program. A&M-Texarkana students may continue on after completing their MSIS degree to earn the certificate.

Eligibility

To be eligible to enroll in Bush School courses, a student needs to be enrolled in the MSIS program here at A&M-Texarkana, have successfully completed six or more semester credit hours of MSIS course work with a minimum of three credit hours in an international subject matter (or have significant international experience), and have a cumulative GPA in graduate school of 3.0 (B average). The one A&M-Texarkana course having an international aspect does not have to be a Political Science seminar. The online Bush School seminars are among those of the Certificate in Advanced International Affairs (CAIA) program.
